Full analysis

Overview

Cut The Crap is a corporate website for a Mumbai-based creative and advertising agency, presenting its agency story, founder biography, branding and campaign work, case studies, and contact information for prospective business clients.

Scam/Impersonation Risk

No contradictions were observed. The site presents a coherent corporate purpose centred on creative and advertising services, with no investment solicitation, cryptocurrency activity, payment-request mechanism, login form, credential-harvesting flow, or detected brand-impersonation indicators. Its content and behaviour are consistent with an agency website rather than an abuse-oriented service, and the available external checks contained no malicious or suspicious findings.

EVIDENCE

- Homepage and About page: describe Cut The Crap as a creative agency, its founder's background, and work for startups and larger brands.
- Case Studies and Our Work pages: present agency projects and service-related content rather than financial or account-based interactions.
- Page behaviour: two successful runs showed no login form, hidden sensitive form, external password form, wallet connection, clipboard manipulation, cloaking, or suspicious inline scripts.
- External reputation checks: recorded zero malicious findings, zero suspicious findings, and no confirmed blacklist or phishing indicators.

Regulatory Verification Notes

The available evidence is consistent with an established, apparently legitimate corporate website, but the real-world operator identity remains independently unverified. The site identifies itself through the Cut The Crap name, a founder biography, agency information, case studies, and contact details; these are useful identity claims but do not independently prove the legal contracting entity. No regulated-service licence or registration number is presented, which is a transparency item to clarify if a proposed engagement involves a regulated activity; for the stated creative-agency business model, this is not itself evidence of a scam. The domain is long-established, and its registration record identifies "Cut the Crap" as the organisation and Own Web Solution Pvt. Ltd. as registrar.

EVIDENCE

- Domain registration record: registered 2009-01-06; approximately 17.63 years old; expiration 2029-01-06; registrar Own Web Solution Pvt. Ltd.; organisation "Cut the Crap."
- Hosting and transport telemetry: served from AS14061, DigitalOcean, LLC, US.
- TLS certificate: issued by YR2, DV validation, valid to 2026-11-14.
- About and Contact pages: provide the agency narrative, founder information, physical address, and business contact details.

What to Verify Next

Before any engagement that creates a payment or credential obligation, the proposed contracting entity should be matched independently to applicable business records and the supplied contact channels. The statement of work, counterparty name, payment destination, cancellation or return terms, and available payment protections should be confirmed before funds or sensitive information are exchanged. If the engagement would involve a regulated service rather than ordinary creative work, the relevant regulator's register should also be checked.

EVIDENCE

- About page: supplies the agency and founder claims that can be matched to the proposed contracting party.
- Contact page: supplies the business contact and location details suitable for independent confirmation.
- Service presentation: describes a client-contract and project-fee model rather than a self-service payment or account workflow.

Summary Verdict

The site has a high-trust, low-risk posture and is apparently legitimate on the available evidence. Its established presence, coherent corporate content, stable technical operation, and absence of contradictory signals support normal consideration for a standard business engagement, while the lack of independent operator verification means identity should remain qualified rather than treated as proven.

Infrastructure Integrity

A CDN/WAF layer is present, with observed traffic handled through an edge address and no origin candidate identified in the infrastructure analysis. This provides a mitigating layer against direct exposure of the underlying service, but protective infrastructure is not, by itself, proof of organisational legitimacy.

Closing Assessment

Ordinary engagement is proportionate, subject to independent counterparty, contractual, and payment-protection checks before credentials or funds are committed.

What the analysis found

No rule findings contributed to this verdict.

Identity verification

Status	UNVERIFIED
Identity score	30/100
Identity verification confidence	50%

- No on-site identity signals detected

Identity verification measures whether the site can be independently connected to a real-world brand or person. It is separate from the classification confidence.

About this assessment

A trust score summarises the evidence TrustSniffer could collect about cutthecrap.in at assessment time. It is a starting point for your own judgement, not a guarantee: a high score means the signals were consistent with a legitimately operated site, a low or critical score means several risk patterns were present.

TrustSniffer assesses a website from the evidence it can collect at a point in time: domain registration and age, hosting and certificate, the content the site served, and third-party reputation feeds. A score is a summary of that evidence, not a guarantee and not a legal finding. There is no human rating and no user review in it. A site can change after it is assessed.
